the direction and patronage of the

Melcher-Walker

Masses of pink and white blooms, trailing vines and Southern smilax decorated the home of Mr. and Mrs.
Thomas Jefferson Walker, 926 Park Avenue, for the marriage of their daughter, Nellie Thomas, to Leo Melcher, son of Mrs. E. W. Melcher, of New York. The ceremony took place last evening at 6 o'clock, the Rev. W. J.
Young, D. D., pastor of Centenary Methodist Church, officiating. An orchestra played the wedding music.

The drawing-room, where an improved altar of palms, cathedral candles and lilies was arranged in the bay window, was decorated entirely in white. The room with its garlands of smilax caught to pedestals topped with small baskets of white blooms.
Pink roses were used in the library and dining-room, and smilax outlined the windows and doorways.

The bride's wedding gown was fashioned of softest white chiffon, distinguished with rose point and duchess lace, and her veil of illusion was arranged with a wreath of orange blossoms.
Her bouquet was showers of white orchids and lilies of the valley, and she descended the stairway with her father, who gave her in marriage. The wedding party at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Albert J.
Mehler, and Miss Mary Walker was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a lovely pink champagne dress with a tulle of silver lace and crystal embroidery, and carried a big bouquet of pink roses and gardenias. The bridesmaids, Misses Annie Duke Walker and Pauline Walker, were gowned alike in pale pink crepe de Chine with overlaid shadow lace, and carried pink roses. Little Elizabeth Magie, of Waynesboro, was flower girl, and wore a white lace frock with pink ribbons, and carried a French basket of pink flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Melcher left later in the evening for a wedding journey to New York, and will be at home after January 15 in Waynesboro. Mrs. Walker, mother of the bride, was a handsome town of white champagne draped in Spanish lace, and a corsage bouquet of lavender orchids. Out of town guests attending the wedding were Mrs. E. W. Mehler, Miss Mehler, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mehler, Miss Marguerite Walker, Harry Devora, Albert ceremony took place on Tuesday morning at 11:15 o'clock at the home of the bride's grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. W.

Peyton Moncure, in Fairfax, and the Rev. Frank Page officiated. The house was decorated in evergreens, roses and carnations, and Mrs. Page, of Sagen-dorf, an aunt of the bride, played the wedding march and "Meditation" during the ceremony. The bride, who was given in marriage by her grandfather, Dr. Moncure, wore a traveling costume of brown chiffon broadcloth with a modish hat to match. Dr. David C.
Cather, United States Navy, attended his brother as best man, and Miss

SWITZERLAND NAMES ITS NEW PRESIDENT

Colonel Arthur Hofmann Will Enter Upon Duties of Office on January 1.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.

SWITZERLAND has just elected her new President, who will enter upon the duties of his office on the 1st of January. He is Colonel Arthur Hofmann, of the Canton of St.
Gall, that is to say, of the Canton which has the largest amount of trade and commerce with the United States.

At present Vice-President and chief of the military department, he was previously to that the chief of the Department of Finance, and before that head of the Department of Justice and of Police. So that he has plenty of experience in the art and science of Federal government.

The emoluments of the office of President of Switzerland are not large.
Last year they were raised from $3,000 to $4,000 per annum; not, however, without a good deal of opposition in the Federal Assembly, where there was much discussion of the alleged waste of public funds for mere purposes of show. As the Swiss government does not provide any official residence, nor even an equipage for the chief magistrate, and as the high price of living has affected even Helvetia, Federal office in the land of the mythical William Tell can hardly be described as lucrative, and the salary of its President seems but a mere flea-bant compared to those of President Woodrow Wilson and President Poincare.

Nothing like an American presidential campaign takes place in Switzerland. The election is not decided on party grounds. Parties exist in Switzerland, it is true, but in the Federal Assembly there is a permanent majority of Democrats, and a permanent minority of Conservatives, who, to some extent, correspond to the Catholic Central party in Germany. But this party division never appears during the election of the President. The President may be by race German-Swiss, French-Swiss, or Italian-Swiss; by religion Protestant or Catholic, and in politics either Democrat or Conservative.

The Federal Assembly, consisting of the two chambers of the Federal Legislature—namely, the State Council and the National Council—together elect the President from among the seven members of the so-called Federal Council. The Federal Council is elected for a term of three years by the Federal Assembly. These seven members of the Federal Council head the seven states departments of the Federal administration. They are not permitted to engage in any other calling or business.

They are chosen less with regard to their party than to their efficiency. It is this that also guides the Federal Assembly in the election of the President. Thus, in spite of the Democratic majority in the Federal Assembly, the President, who was elected unanimously, Dr. Giuseppe Mothet, is a Conservative and a devout Catholic.

In accordance with time-honored precedent, he will be elected to succeed Colonel Hofmann as chief magistrate of the republic next December, for the term commencing on January 1, 1915.

As a general rule, the election of the President is unanimous. That of Colonel Hofmann was not. The number of members voting against him was too small, however, to cause him to hesitate about accepting the office.

There have been cases where a President has refused to accept his election, on account of the extent of the opposition, and in 1881 Fridolin Anderwert was so distressed by the relatively small majority by which he had been elected, in interpreting the adverse vote as a lack of confidence in his integrity and capacity, that he committed suicide on the very eve of the commencement of what was to have been his term of office.

Sometimes the Presidents of Switzerland are men of great culture, breeding and even wealth, while others, despite their invariable personal dignity, have not belonged to the same class of society. Thus, the late Sir Horace Rumbold, who was for so many years British minister at Bern, and who retired from the diplomatic service as ambassador at the court of Austria, relates in his "Reminiscences" how, in calling one day at the house of the then President of the Swiss republic, at Bern, to pay his respects, and to leave his card, he was admitted, in response to his ring, by a motherlylooking woman, with bare arms all covered with scapulae, "Madame la Presidente" having come straight from the family wash tub to answer the bell.

Another President was a very estimable hotel-keeper, and during his term of office his son committed suicide, at Dijon, in France, where he was learning the hotel business, in the capacity of head waiter of one of the most famous and extremely inconspicuous hotels in France. The President was M. R. Puchet, hailing from Morges, on the Lake of Geneva. During his term of office he used usually to be found at night at some of the modest cabarets at Bern, where, sitting in his shirt-sleeves, he was admitted,
in response to his ring, by a motherly-
bell.

Only twice a year does the President emerge from his relative obscurity.
The first time is at the close of the national annual army manoeuvres, when he reviews the troops—they are all militiamen—seated on horseback, arrayed, not in uniform, but in full evening dress, with a high silk hat.

The second occasion is during the national shooting competition, which are always signified by patriotic manifestations.

No matter how simple the ways of the chief magistracy of the Swiss republic, and of his six fellow members of the Federal Council, no matter what their little oddities of appearance and of manner, they do not in any way excite ridicule, but are altogether remarkable for their natural dignity.

It was this, perhaps, more than anything else, that so profoundly impressed Emperor William when he visited Switzerland last year to attend the Swiss army manoeuvres and was afterwards entertained at Bern by the President and the members of the Federal Council. In fact, so great was their dignity, coupled with their truly republican simplicity of manner, that they compared, not unfavorably, with the great nobles and high military officers comprised in the suite of the Kaiser.

Though Emperor Menelik of Abyssinia and repeatedly been reported as dead, during the past three years, the fact has lately been officially established, to the satisfaction of the English and French governments, that he is still alive, though completely paralyzed, a mental and physical wreck.

On a recent occasion, when some of the foreign envoys were accorded a glimpse of him, they were shown a recumbent figure, all wrapped up, and which betrayed but the faintest signs of life. While the darkness prevented them from examining his features, they nevertheless were able to recognize in him the once so vigorous and Imperious Negus, now little better than a living corpse.

Whatever his faults, Menelik was a strong and astute ruler, and the of his guiding hand is very apparent in the chaotic condition of affairs at present prevailing in Abyssinia. Unfortunately, his grandson, the heir apparent, now sixteen years of age, and who alone among the royal family of the Old World rejoices in the name of the founder of Christianity, as Crown Prince Jaesus (which is the Abyssinian for Jesus), gives no evidence of having inherited either his grandfather's ability, or strength of character. He has already developed habits of the most intemperate description, being, despite his youth, a confirmed drunkard, shows both in his mind and physique the disastrous effects of the poisonous debauchery and as president of the council of ministers, and de facto regent, fails to keep under control the rival interests of the great races, or feudal chief-doms, who exercise almost sovereign powers in their respective provinces, merely now recognizing the Negus as their overlord and suzerain.

Civil war may be looked for in Abyssinia at any moment, and there is but little doubt that the Empire of Ethiopia will eventually share the fate of Morocco, and be divided up by Great Britain, France and Italy, the three European powers who are at present the guarantors of its independence.
